The map on the opposite page depicts the proportion of populations professing the major religions of the country, namely, Hinduism, Islam, Christianity, Jainism, Sikhism and Buddhism.

7. The proportion of Hindu population in the rural areas in the State is considerably higher than that in the urban areas. Actually 91.06% of the rural population are Hindus while in the urban areas of the State they constitute only 75.85% of the population. The rural population represents basically the indigenous population not subject to the influences of migration and other religious forces to the extent that urban population is. The indigenous population of the State is predominantly Hindu. It is natural to expect a higher proportion of other religious followers in the urban areas than in the rural areas. For example, 19.42% of the urban population in the State are Muslims as against only 5.04% in the rural areas. Even in the case of Christians, though the disparity in the rural and urban proportions is not so marked as in the case of Muslims, yet the urban proportion (4.45%) is slightly higher than the corresponding rural proportion of 3.87%. The same trend is observed in the case of almost all the other minor religions including Jains, Parsis and Sikhs. In the case of Buddhists, the rural and urban proportions are equal, each being however negligible - 0.02%. The relatively high proportion of Hindu population in the rural areas as compared to urban areas is observed in the case of all the districts though the disparity is more pronounced in Cuddapah, Anantapur and Kurnool districts in Rayalaseema and almost all the Telangana districts, the reason being that these districts were subject to Muslim rule in the medieval period and the Muslim influence has led to a considerable section of urban population being Muslim, the proportion of Hindus in the urban population of these districts thus getting reduced as compared to the rural population. The most marked difference in the rural and urban proportion of Hindus is observed in the case of Hyderabad district where the proportion of Hindus in the rural areas is 89.40% as against a proportion of only 59.87% in the urban population of the district. This is naturally due to the large concentration of Muslim population in Hyderabad city which accounts for almost all the urban population of the district.

8. In the case of Muslims, they constitute a higher proportion of the population in the urban areas of each district in the State compared to the corresponding rural proportion. The difference between the rural and urban proportions of Muslims in the districts is more marked than in the case of Hindus. The proportion of Muslims in the urban areas of any district is at least double the corresponding rural proportion. Thus the Muslims appear to be generally more of town dwellers than rural and most of them are engaged in urban occupations such as business, services, industries and crafts such as tanning, pile carpet weaving, beedi making, etc. It should, however, be noted that in terms of absolute figures, by virtue of the population of the State being mostly rural the number of Muslims is larger in the rural areas than in the urban areas of which has more than 100 Sikhs, there are only 16 females as against 166 males. In this district also most of the Sikh males are perhaps employed in the Naval or other defence establishments at Visakhapatnam as also the Trade and Commerce of Visakhapatnam city might have attracted a few Sikh migrants temporarily.

23. The Zoroastrian or Parsi community has recorded a very high sex-ratio of 1,460 females per 1,000 males in the State. This situation is entirely due to the heavy disproportion in the number of males and females among Zoroastrians in Hyderabad district which contains 90% of the Zoroastrians in the State.

The sex-ratio for Parsis in Hyderabad district is as high as 1,681 females per 1,000 males. Perhaps a number of males left Hyderabad for different places in Maharashtra leaving their families behind, after the States Reorganisation and the formation of the Central Railway. Business interests may also be leading to the males being away at places like Bombay for a long time while the females stayed back at home.

24. Among the Jains there are 879 females per 1,000 males in the State. Hyderabad district accounting for more than 30% of the Jains in the State has a very balanced sex-ratio of 999 probably because

Most of the Jains who are largely businessmen or industrialists have settled down with their families in Hyderabad city. In the other districts of the State, the sex-ratio varies from district to district in an erratic fashion, the highest ratio being as high as 2,875 females per 1,000 males in Anantapur district and the lowest less than 300 females per 1000 males in Visakhapatnam district. Such a phenomenon is due to the number of Jains being very small in several districts and due to the frequent travels of the male folk in connection with their business or industry. It is not necessary to discuss the sex-ratio among the other religions because their numbers are very small and they are very unevenly distributed in the State, existing only in a district or two.

Variation in the proportion of population of different religions—1911-1961

25. The following statements give the distribution of 10,000 persons in total, rural and urban areas of the State and each district according to religion and the distribution of 10,000 persons of each major religious community among the districts from 1911 to 1961. These statements will help us to gauge the tendency of increase or decrease in the proportion of the various religious groups from decade to decade.

DISTRIBUTION OF MAJOR RELIGIOUS COMMUNITIES BY INDUSTRIAL CATEGORIES

tribal religion at the present Census. There is a fair number of Christians among the tribals, the Yerukulas being the chief adherents. In the State 619 males and 985 females in the rural population and 92 males and 61 females in the urban population among the Yerukulas are Christians and most of them are concentrated in Guntur district. A fairly good number of Konda Dhoras (Rural M: 372, F. 390 and Urban M. 23 and F. 26) and Jatapus (Rural M. 251 and F. 253) are found to have adopted Christian faith, most of them being in Srikakulam district. A few Valmikis of Visakhapatnam and East Godavari districts are also found to profess Christianity. The Buddhists come next in numbers and almost all of them are concentrated among the Konda Dhoras (Males 99 and Females 72) of Visakhapatnam district.

41. Statement IX.8 shows that the proportion of workers to their respective total populations among Muslims, Jains, Sikhs and the followers of other minor religions is considerably lower than the State average of 10% found in the total general population. The preponderance of non-working population among these communities is due to the fact that 80 to 95% of the females in these communities are non-workers mainly on account of their social customs and traditions not favouring participation of women folk in work. Among Hindus, Christians and Buddhists the proportion of workers is higher than the State average in the general population mainly due to the higher proportion of agricultural workers, i.e., cultivators and agricultural labourers in these communities.

42. Statements IX.7 and IX.8 reveal the preference of each of the major religious communities for certain categories of work.

43. The largest proportion of workers as Cultivators (Category I) and not as Agricultural Labourers (Category II) is found among the Hindus. It is obvious that most of the land owners and the cultiva-
